Nestled at the end of a long, tree-lined driveway, in a rural position, this charming and beautifully presented timber-framed Sussex Farmhouse dates back in part to the 16th Century. Sympathetically and extensively renovated to a high standard, the property is a comfortable and adaptable family home, enjoying a rarely found setting, with an outlook over farmland and the surrounding countryside.

The property retains many interesting period features and has the benefit of modern technology providing sustainable energy by way of solar panels and a biomass boiler, which not only reduce the reliance on fossil fuels, but also provide a source to manage the surrounding woodland, and generate useful income. Further points of note include:

Barelands Farmhouse:
• well proportioned rooms, with high ceiling heights for a house of this age, and accommodation arranged over three floors;
• leaded light and oak framed windows, aged oak red and cleft beech beams, fireplaces and character deep latch oak interior doors;
• 2 principal reception rooms in the oldest part of the house, comprising a sitting room with stone inglenook fireplace and oak flooring, and a dining room on this floor with oak fireplace and built-in oak shelving;
• separate study with built-in oak shelving and oak flooring;
• dining room overlooking the garden in a more recent part of the house, with double doors out to the terrace, a brick fireplace with a stone hearth and oak flooring;
• rear hall with built-in oak shelving and oak flooring with double doors out to the terrace;
• modern country-style kitchen with an Aga, open plan to an impressive oak framed breakfast room with under floor heating and a high vaulted ceiling. This lovely family space enjoys a far reaching outlook through big windows over the garden and lakes to the rear;
• practical family space including utility room and boot room;
• 8 good-sized individual bedrooms, all enjoying a lovely outlook and arranged over the first and second floors;
• 4 well-appointed bath/shower rooms.
The Barn: Formerly part of the original dairy unit on the farm, a converted brick and timber detached barn is conveniently located adjacent to the main house, accessed via a covered walkway and now offering excellent ancillary family space, currently including:

• an impressive 46' leisure room, with a home cinema, a high vaulted ceiling and double doors opening out to a sheltered swimming pool area behind, together with a sauna, steam-shower and cloakroom;

• gym with a small kitchenette;

• snooker room.

Outbuildings: A useful range of timber outbuildings lie away from the house, linked to the barn and including a workshop, double bay open garage, pool room and, for those with equestrian interests, three loose boxes.

Biomass Energy System: A substantial agricultural barn of some 5,102 sq ft, located on the opposite side of the yard, provides a workshop and machinery store, in addition to the space required for the state-of-the-art biomass energy centre, installed by Nexus Energy in 2013 and under a 20 year contract. This high tech system utilises circa 90 tonnes of seasoned wood chip per year which is harvested from the farm’s woodland, processed on site and fed directly into the fuel store. This heats the water and provides central heating for the house, swimming pool and barn. The heat produced is metered and Barelands Farm also supplies hot water to the next door Oast house, which is under separate ownership. The income generated from the Biomass system is in the region of £12,000 per annum.

The Woodland: Amounting to about 50 acres, arranged in several blocks and administered under a Forestry Commission management plan, in conjunction with the sustainable Biomass Energy System, the woodland is linked to the farm by a network of bridleways, creating a superb natural environment to encourage and sustain a wide variety of fauna and flora.

Lakes to the South East: Located towards the southern boundary of the farm is a further large lake of about 3.6 acres, stocked with trout and carp and offering opportunities for fishing and water sports.

Gardens and Grounds: Barelands Farm enjoys a glorious setting within private gardens, with rolling countryside comprising areas of pastureland and woodland beyond, providing unique unspoiled natural environments.
