Canal Street

Jericho, Oxford

A three-bedroom terrace with a kitchen opening onto a leafy courtyard.

Location

Canal Street, Jericho, Oxford

Canal Street runs through the residential heart of Jericho, just north-west of Oxford city centre. The painted sign of the Old Bookbinders marks the corner of Victor Street, and the tower of St Barnabas rises above the surrounding brick terraces.

Walton Street has independent coffee shops, restaurants and the Phoenix Picturehouse for an evening film. For a change of pace, the Oxford Canal towpath leads north towards the open grassland of Port Meadow. Little Clarendon Street leads in towards St Giles' and the city centre.

The sitting room

Deep teal walls set off an ornate black fireplace with floral tile panels. Exposed floorboards run past the white-painted staircase and through to the kitchen.

At the kitchen table

A broad window above the sink looks straight into the garden. White cupboards line the walls, leaving space for a round dining table beside the glazed garden door.

The courtyard garden

A paved seating area sits just beyond the kitchen. Ferns soften its edges and established climbers weave through the trellis around it.

Two bedrooms upstairs

The larger bedroom faces Canal Street, with painted floorboards and room for an armchair by the window. A second bedroom lies across the landing towards the rear.

A room of its own

The third bedroom opens off the entrance passage at the front of the house. Arranged as a study, it has a desk beneath the window and shelves set into the alcoves.

The bathroom

A window at the rear brings daylight into the first-floor bathroom, with a shower over the bath. The WC has its own door from the landing.

The property

Three-bedroom terraced house in Jericho

Behind the turquoise front door, a passage leads past the ground-floor bedroom to a sitting room with deep teal walls, exposed floorboards and a fireplace edged in floral tiles. A white-painted staircase rises along one wall, while a broad opening leads through to the kitchen.

At the back of the house, the dining table sits beside a glazed door to the garden. From the kitchen sink there is a view across the courtyard, where ferns and climbers surround a paved spot for a table and chairs.

Two bedrooms occupy the first floor, together with a bathroom and separate WC. The third bedroom, at the front on the ground floor, is currently arranged as a study.
