Bronlei Woods : A Transparent Impact /2

With an almost entirely glazed front elevation, 2 Bronlei Woods is undoubtedly striking.

What makes this home, designed for Kilpark by architect Michael Cooper, even more distinctive is that it's not a one-off, multi-million pound contemporary house in the centre of London or set within acres of private grounds; it's priced at under a million comprises, 2,227 sq ft and is one of just four similar, semi-detached homes set just outside Bramley, one of affluent Surrey's most popular villages.

In defining its aesthetic appeal, it's fair to say there's absolutely nothing pastiche in its architecture which provides clear evidence that highly contemporary design can fit any location if it's bespoke to its setting; Bronlei Woods optimises its elevated position and wooded backdrop to maximum effect but perhaps even more importantly, it's an impressive home offering exceptional living space, which makes an impact.

Given the value of land in this area and its price tag of under a million pounds, achieving a 'grand design' such as this makes this project all the more remarkable.

A Sense Of Arrival

Bronlei Woods is imbued with its own natural 'importance'. On arrival, looking up at the four homes, there's an undeniable impression of superiority! They enjoy a great sense of 'majesty' from their elevated position.

Entry is via a robust, heavy timber remote controlled five-bar gate into a generous parking area. Bins are discreetly hidden within a rustic timber bin store. Two paths wind their way through the light wooded grounds which are punctuated with magnificent specimen trees to the steps leading up to the houses.

A Sense of Arrival /5

Rather than brick walls, gabions conceal the private underground parking; the entrance to which is just as robust as the timber gate leading up to the houses.

A Sense Of Arrival /6

Open tread metal staircases hint at some of the trendy industrial features to be found internally and offer an introduction to the sharp contemporary style of the whole project as you ascend to the terrace above.

The astro-turfed front lawn not only provides a clean, uncluttered look but ensures ease of maintenance, while glass and stainless steel balustrades to the terrace and around the ventilation openings to the underground parking area, reflect the visual lines to be found throughout the design of these homes.

A Sense of Arrival /7

Looking up, the clean visual impact is clearly evident on the front elevation of the house; the glass frontage is only slightly interrupted by crisp white render on the lower level, while glass and steel balconies punctuate the upper floors leading to the pitched roof above.

A Sense of Arrival /8

A gravel path and timber walkway leads to the main entrance of the home; residents will undoubtedly enter via the garage below directly into the lower ground floor – secure as well as practical in wet weather for unloading shopping.

A Modern Lifestyle for Independent Family Living

As you step inside 2 Bronlei Woods, you are hit by an overriding sense of light and space, thanks to the slip window to the side of the front door, double height ceilings and continued uncluttered lines.

The hallway leads past a guest cloakroom and bedrooms ideal for older children who want independence or guests for greater privacy, up to the first floor via a wooden staircase flanked on one side by a glass wall.

Space To Relax

Practical Considerations

Further along the hallway, a laundry room is plenty big enough to house a Smeg washing machine and separate tumble dryer, while a sink and cupboards provide convenient and useful extra washing facilities and storage. Leading from this room is a large plant room housing the mechanics of the house and the hot water tank.

Location

Bronlei Woods is situated on the edge of Bramley, a quintessential village which lies within a Conservation Area and at the heart of the Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty yet is just five miles from the centre of Guildford and its historic High Street.

Known in the 11th century as Bronlei, the Saxon village of Bramley has retained much of its historical charm with many of the buildings on the High Street reflecting the architecture of that time. Today, the village has a range of amenities including a village supermarket, post office, two pubs, two takeaways, a library, beauty salon and petrol station, as well as a selection of independent local shops.

The surrounding area has an excellent selection of both state and independent schools from St Catherine's in Bramley itself, Cranleigh School and Charterhouse in nearby Godalming to Guildford High School, Longacre and Priors Field.

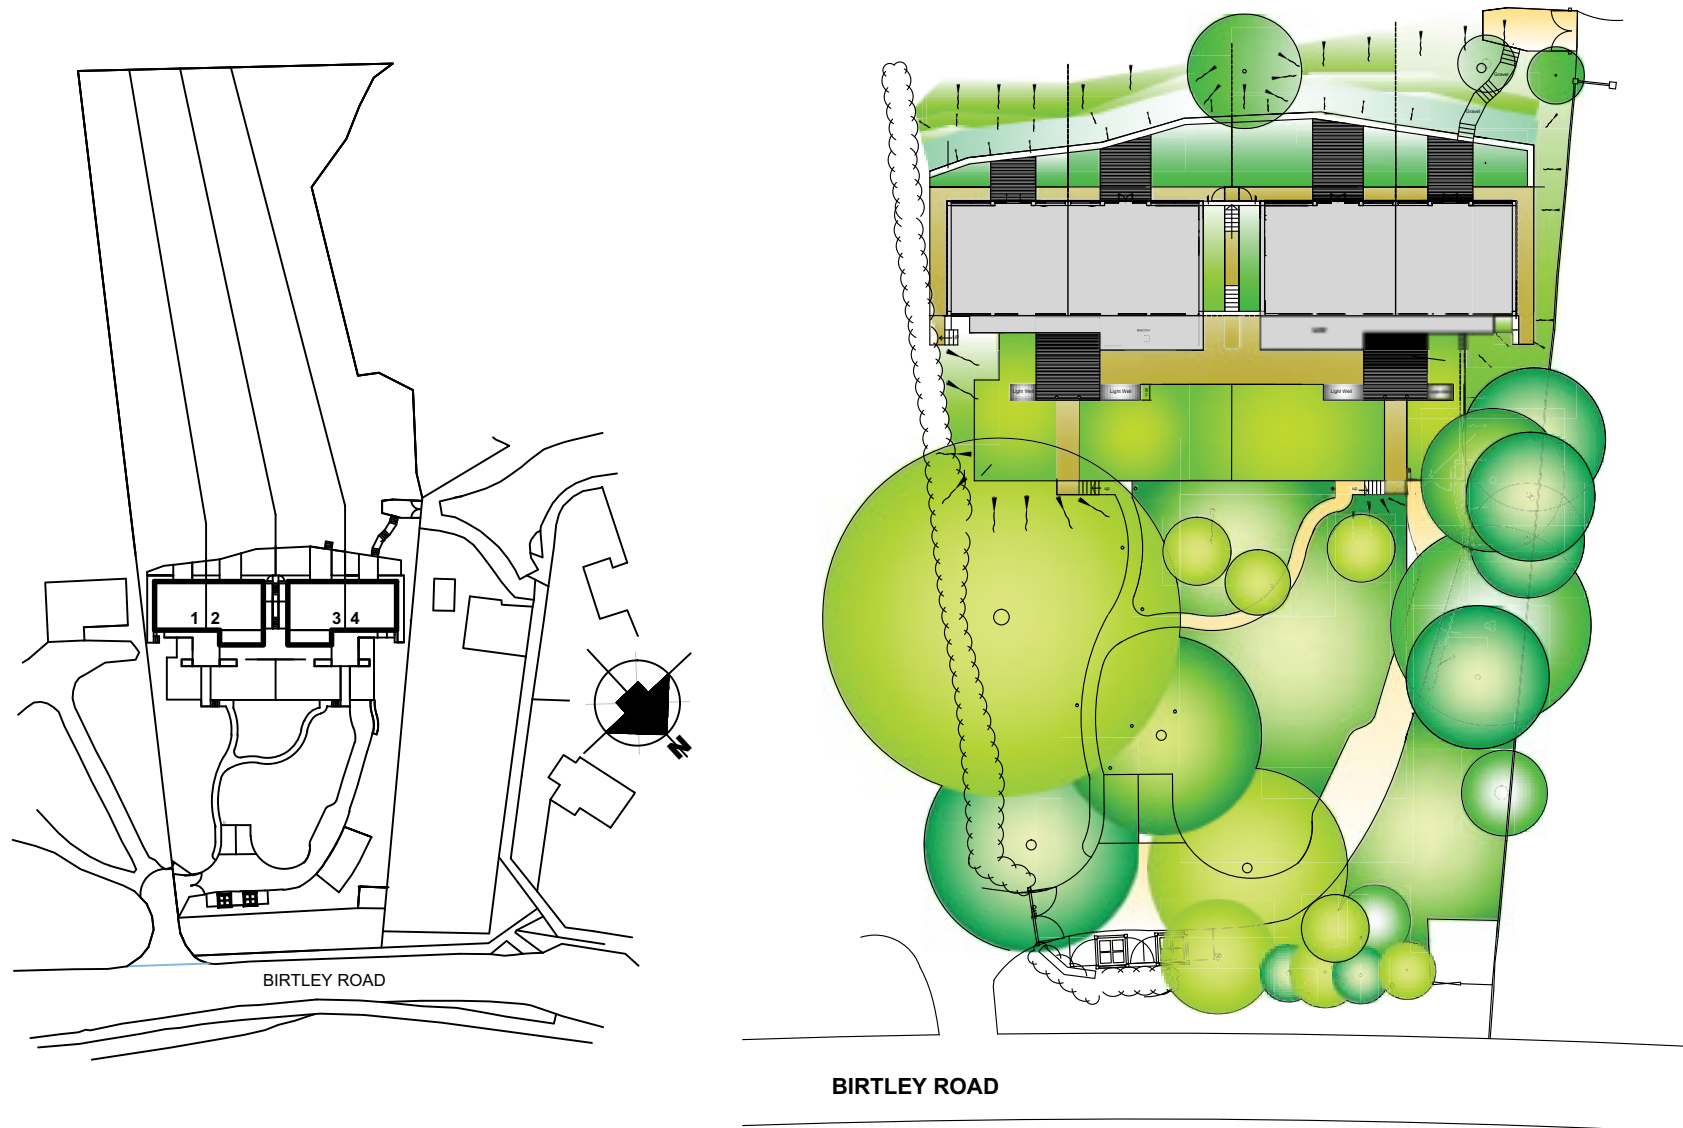

Guildford not only provides some of the best shopping and cultural facilities outside London but also great travel connections with a mainline railway station providing services to London Waterloo in 35 minutes. The A3 also connects to the M25 within 14 miles and Gatwick and Heathrow Airports are both within 28 miles.
