RECTORY AVENUE, HIGH WYCOMBE
BUCKINGHAMSHIRE

A select development of Luxury, Ultra Modern 4 bedroom houses

WELCOME TO SOUTH VIEW

An exclusive new development of 4 Luxury houses with stunning views of the Wye Valley to the South.

HISTORY

The prestigious South View development is at the heart of an area steeped in history and tradition which dates back to early Roman times.

South View is situated close to the old Market & Industrial town of High Wycombe, with a traditional emphasis on furniture production. The town once featured a Roman villa (built 150 – 170 AD) with mosaics and a bath house which was unearthed at the site on what is now the Rye parkland.

High Wycombe remained a mill town through Medieval and Tudor times, manufacturing lace and linen cloth. In the 17th & 18th century the town became notable for paper due to the River Wye's water which was rich in chalk. High Wycombe's most famous industry, furniture (particularly Windsor chairs) took hold in the 19th century and in 1875 it was estimated that there were 4,700 chairs made per day in High Wycombe. Queen Victoria visited the town in 1877 and the council organised an arch of chairs to be erected over the High Street, with the words "Long live the Queen" printed boldly across the arch for the Queen to pass under.

Today, the Wycombe Museum includes many examples of locally made chairs and information on the local furniture and lace industries.

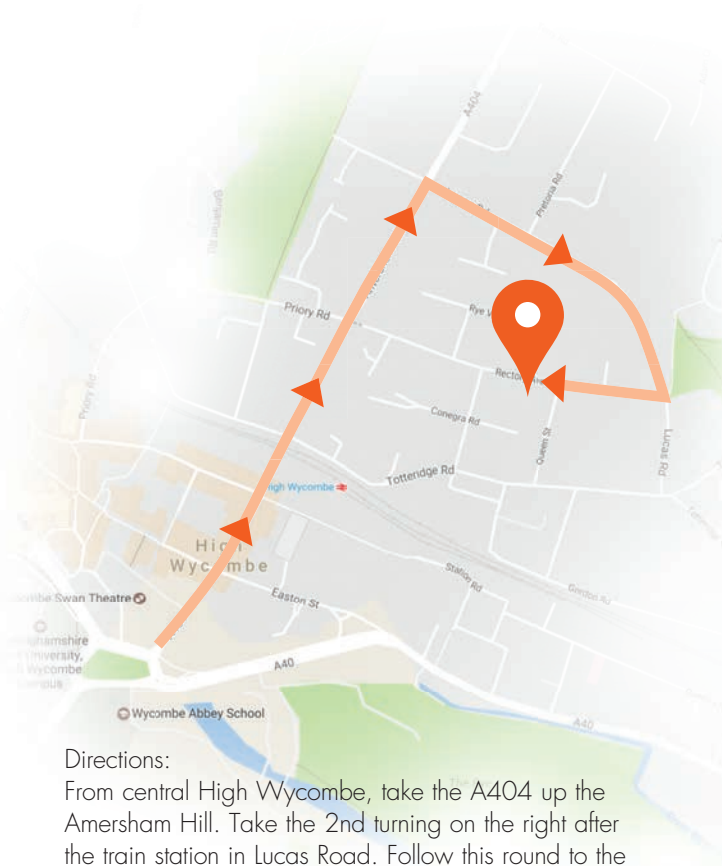

From 1940 to 1968 High Wycombe was the seat of RAF Bomber Command, and from May 1942 to July 1945, the U.S. Army Air Force's 8th Air Force Bomber Command, code named 'Pinetree', was based at a former girls' school at High Wycombe.

More recently the town has undergone major redevelopment, including a new shopping centre (Eden Shopping centre) as well as redevelopment of the Buckinghamshire New University with a large student village. These developments have also prompted the building of a new multimillion-pound hotel in the centre, a new Sainsburys together with the development of the bus and train stations.

From the outset, we follow an enhanced ecology philosophy with rigorous ecological assessments of our site prior to our development to ensure we improve the habitat as a result of our work. This informs our planting policies and other habitat enhancements to attract more species than before we started.

Through every aspect of our building process we are fully compliant with the high standards set in the new code for sustainable homes. Our commitment to this delivers sustainable drainage applications to capture and re-use rainwater where possible and minimise run-off.

We only use energy efficient system boilers and hot water storage systems, while our appliances are high specification

We embrace new technologies and innovations to ensure we provide homes that balance luxury and indulgence with responsibility.
