Situation

Poundbury's guiding principles reflect King Charles's belief that new urban building should be on a human scale, fostering a sense of community and pride in the immediate environment.

The architecture at Poundbury is unashamedly traditional, using material such as stone, slate brick and render. Great emphasis is placed on the quality of design and materials, detail and landscaping. Poundbury is already a vibrant and established community, offering the sort of convenience which makes for a relaxed lifestyle, for everyone. Facilities range from doctors and dentists to cafés and wine merchants. Need a cycle shop? A florist? A butcher? All these and much more are just a short stroll away, tucked in to Poundbury's attractive streets and quiet corners.

Just down the road, Dorchester itself is an increasingly appealing county town, attracting a variety of new restaurants and up-market retailers. Dorchester's two rail stations offer ready links to Southampton, Bristol and London.
