Holly Berry Barn is located in the beautiful village of Bulwick, nestled in the Northamptonshire rolling countryside between Stamford and Corby. The village contains a church, 17th century Public House, The Queen's Head, and a charming village shop also offering breakfasts, lunches and afternoon tea on the terrace as well as the Bulwick village centre. For further amenities, the local market town of Oundle is approximately seven miles East and similarly Stamford is approximately 10 miles North, offering a wealth of shops and a fabulous selection of leisure facilities, restaurants, cafes, pubs, wine bars, theatre and cinema as well as local weekly markets.

Communication links are excellent with the A43 north connecting to the A47 between the city of Leicester and the Cathedral city of Peterborough, the latter with a mainline rail service to London Kings Cross in under an hour, also with access to the A1 accessing north to south of the country. The A43 to the south leads first to Corby and then Kettering where mainline rail services go to London St Pancras International also in less than an hour. From Kettering there is access to the A14 accessing east to west of the country. Educational facilities nearby are excellent with state and private schooling in Oundle, Stamford, Oakham and Uppingham with a number of primary schools available in the neighboring villages and local town of Oundle too. With beautiful countryside walks on your doorstep, for entertainment a little further afield, the recreational facility of Rutland Water, with an array of sailing, fishing, walks and cycling routes as well as the nature reserve, is just 12 miles north. Leisure pursuits, such as golf, are close by at Luffenham Heath, Burghley Park and Elton.
