Woodditton is a highly desirable village situated in most attractive countryside, much of which is given over to stud farming. Situated 3 miles south of Newmarket, Woodditton contains a number of interesting period and modern properties and has its own local public house recently renovated and a 14th century church. The village also lies to the eastern end of the "Devils Dyke", thought to be an Anglo Saxon earthwork, and it is this earthwork which gave Ditton its name, 'settlement by the ditch'. Little Ditton is a small hamlet of Woodditton.

There are local primary schools situated in the nearby villages of Cheveley and Dullingham and secondary schooling is provided for at Bottisham Village College. Sports facilities, post office and a small shop are available in the nearby villages of Stetchworth and Cheveley.
