THE PROPERTY

The Old Gaol or Charley Box is steeped in history - a Freehold Grade II listed property built around 1830 and situated at the bottom of Picton Street, the first purpose built Georgian shopping street, in the heart of Montpelier known by many as the creative and artistic quarter in Bristol. Bristol did not set up their police force until 1836, so the Charley was given the powers to arrest and confine overnight anyone who disturbed the peace and, if necessary, transfer them to the magistrates the following morning. Back then the Old Gaol consisted of a very small room for the Charley and two barrel-vaulted cells, one of which still has its iron-studded door. Below street level there were two more vaulted rooms with a squint in the dividing wall.

In recent times the Old Gaol has been used for a wide variety of purposes including a hairdressing salon, a studio, a café and for many years a rental property and then a very popular Airbnb apartment with a music studio below.

There are steps up to the tranquil inner city courtyard garden is a sun trap with well-established trees and shrubs.
