LOCATION

Stoford and Barwick, two closely linked villages on the Dorset/Somerset Border are approx 2 miles south of Yeovil and are well serviced by Yeovil Junction Train Station connecting London to Exeter and the A37 between Yeovil and Dorchester. Barwick dates back to the Bronze Age and is first noted in modern records as far back as 1185 and is well known for Barwick Park and the follies situated in various areas, whilst Stoford was first recorded in the 13th Century as a 'new town' with Burgage plots made available for tenants from local Lords.

Approach

Set in an elevated position on the corner of Newton Road and Court Lane this property fronts both roads with entrance off Court Lane through a low level hamstone wall with wrought iron gates and several steps up to the vestibule entrance door.

Inside

The initial reception entrance area opens to the main building with high vaulted ceiling, stained glass windows and timber flooring.

Planning Design Proposal

The current owner has received planning permission to convert this space into a large 1 bedroom home. Maintaining the structure, the entrance will be to the vestibule and then into the living space. Living Room: Splitting the property in half to create a very spacious main living area with full height vaulted ceilings and utilising the existing windows including the high set windows in the gable end as well as provision of a wood burning stove and flu. Kitchen: With space for storage, white goods and large enough to accommodate a breakfast table plus seating and utilising 4 existing windows. Study: Separate space for a home work area. Bathroom: Situated on the ground floor. Stairs to First Floor with access to the bedroom. The upper landing and bedroom have approval to add roof windows.

Planning Consent

24/01372/FUL Self-build conversion of a former Methodist Chapel to a single residential dwelling; and external alterations to the building including two rooflights and flue on west roof slope and formation of bin collection area behind new metal gate and railings. (Revised application of 23/02054/FUL)
