With a unique approach and setting, this stone cottage is on the end of a small terrace set right on the edge of Bollington and the hills that surround. The accommodation includes three good sized bedrooms and pleasant outlooks across fields towards the Peak National Park, making it an altogether delightful location.

Being on the edge of the village, there is easy access to footpaths, particularly for walking up to the local landmark 'White Nancy' and along to the stunning waterfall at Ingersley Vale. Within a few minutes walk you reach the heart of the village where there are shops for everyday needs, a number of restaurants and pubs, recreational parks and the library. There are bus stops to Tytherington and Macclesfield where comprehensive shopping facilities and a mainline rail station are situated.

The accommodation has gas fired central heating and in more detail comprises:-
