Glyn-Jones & Company are delighted to introduce this charming Grade II listed attached cottage in a quaint semi-rural location. Dating back to circa 1750, this former workhouse (also known as the poorhouse) now boasts flint elevations and is nestled in a conservation area, preserving its' rich local history and tranquillity alike.

Upon entering the gated shrub-bordered path, viewers will step inside to be immediately greeted by the property's charm with the feature exposed timber, latch doors and some sash windows creating a quintessential cottage feel. The lounge/diner is complete with an inviting inglenook fireplace housing a 'Chilli Penguin' wood burner, ideal for those cozy nights in. The shaker style fitted kitchen features modern acrylic worktops yet the character remains with the butler sink and stable style door. A separate utility area with WC adds practicality. On the first floor, there are two double bedrooms along with a family bathroom and storage cupboard. Beyond this, the top floor is home to the master bedroom with a wealth of storage space and the potential to become a master suite if a prospective purchaser wishes to install an en-suite bathroom on this floor (subject to the necessary consents).
