DESCRIPTION

This four bedroom detached cottage is situated in the heart of the coastal village of Polzeath and is set within a plot of approximately one acre. Dating back to 1591, this former mill offers an abundance of character features throughout and array of history alongside. The current owners have carried out extensive renovation works to convert the property into a residence and there is potential for further development on either a residential or commercial basis subject to the relevant permissions.

HISTORY

Dating back to 1591, Shilla Mill was built into the bedrock and was originally used as a corn or grist mill with the sitting room being the former wheel house. It is believed that it could be one of the first properties built in Polzeath and also where Sir John Betjeman wrote poems in the garden. Shilla Mill is mentioned in Betjeman's poem "Trebettherick". At the rear of the property there is a 26ft smugglers cave and two granite pillars which are from the old mill bridge and could date back to the 15th century. The mill was eventually converted into a home by the current owners and the beams are said to have come from shipwrecked boats on the famous Doom Bar, many of which still retain their original detailing and patterns. Shilla, or Sullah, is ancient Cornish for 'the rock consecrated to the sun'.

ACCOMMODATION

You enter the property via the boot room and through to the kitchen which offers a range of base units, space for appliances, electric oven and hob and a dual aspect. The kitchen leads to the sitting room which boasts an exposed bedrock wall with a natural drainage system, exposed beams, log burner and French doors to the garden. One of the upright beams contains a carved head of a lion, said to be one of four remaining in the world. Steps lead to the second sitting/dining room which features an original oak door to the front with the original key, a cabinet from one of the shipwrecks, a stone fireplace with a log burner and an original clome oven.

The first floor landing has an original iron window and gives access to all four bedrooms and the family bathroom. Bedrooms one, two and three are doubles with built in storage. Bedroom four is an adjoining single room accessed through Bedroom two. The family bathroom has a panel bath with electric shower, wash hand basin and a low level WC. The exposed beams on the first floor originate from a ship's keel.

OUTSIDE

A shingle slate driveway leads to a parking area for multiple vehicles, a paddock currently used for camping, outbuildings, and foot paths which lead to Daymer Bay and The Point Golf Course And Health Club via the 17th hole. The camping area has 10 pitches all with electricity points, three sheds (one of which is drylined), two outdoor power showers, two outdoor WC's, a BBQ area and a three bedroom caravan with power and water.
