what the owners will miss

"This home has grown with us. When we first moved in as a couple over eight years ago, we dreamed of transforming this Victorian house into a beautiful family home and it has been exactly that. We've loved the character of the period features, the sense of space from the high ceilings, and the cosy evenings spent in front of the log burner. Raising our baby here has been perfect, with everything we've needed just a short walk away, including the library, doctors, and local parks. We've also loved the location, perfectly positioned between Bristol and Bath, with great access to cycle paths, countryside dog walks, and even our nearby allotment. One of the things we'll miss most is the open-plan kitchen, a favourite spot for cooking and hosting friends and family. The natural light was a selling point for us as the morning sun pours into the bedroom and front room, while the evening light settles beautifully across the garden and decking. During lockdown, we built the garden studio ourselves, a project that kept us busy and has since become a wonderfully practical space for working from home and extra storage. This house has given us so many happy memories, and we hope it brings the same warmth, comfort, and charm to its next owners."
