The Location
 Fowey Harbour is a charming and picturesque inlet between imposing headlands extending for about six miles inland to Lostwithiel with a number of tributaries to explore. Fowey has all the activity of a busy working harbour with ships from many nations entering and leaving.

The village has its own general stores, sub post office, tea rooms, two public houses and a long established boat building and repair yard. The village is connected to Fowey, which has a wider range of boutique shops and lovely restaurants, pubs and businesses catering for most day to day needs

A passenger ferry links Polruan with Fowey, and a car ferry links nearby Bodinnick with Fowey, both running constantly during daylight hours providing easy access to the town's shops and amenities. The area generally is one of Outstanding Natural Beauty with much of the land on the neighbouring headlands being in the ownership of the National Trust (including the beautiful 'hidden' Lantic Bay) with a beautiful coastal footpath known as the Hall Walk running between Polruan and Bodinnick and continuing along the south Cornish coast.

Once away from the immediate local lanes, there are good road connections to the motorway system via the A38/A30. Railway connections (London Paddington) can be made at a number of local stations (Par, Liskeard & Lostwithiel) and there are regular flights from Newquay to London and other cities across the UK and beyond.
