Ivydale is a charming, four double bedroom detached residence that beautifully marries period character with modern family living, having been extensively refurbished. Built in 1890, the property immediately impresses with its spacious, light-filled entrance hallway, which sets a welcoming tone for the rest of the home. To the left, a cozy reception room with a traditional log burner provides a warm retreat, while to the right, a striking double-aspect reception room spans the depth of the house. This room, with French doors opening onto the garden, features exposed wooden beams and classic picture rails, creating a space that feels both refined and comfortable. Elegant cornicing weaves through the home, enhancing its period appeal.

Moving further through the hallway, a conveniently located downstairs toilet and utility room lead towards the property's showpiece—an expansive kitchen and dining area. Extended to accommodate modern family life, this stunning kitchen boasts a central island with quartz worktops and is designed in a timeless Shaker style. A large skylight overhead bathes the space in natural light, making it the heart of the home.

Outside, the property features a generous, south-facing garden perfect for families, with ample space to entertain or relax. At the end of the garden sits a fully self-contained one-bedroom annex, meticulously maintained and ideal for multigenerational living. Complete with electric heating, air conditioning, and an open-plan kitchen, dining, and living space, the annex offers a spacious bedroom, a separate shower room, and private access to its own secluded garden via bifolding doors.

Upstairs in the main house, four spacious double bedrooms await, one of which benefits from an en-suite, while the other three are serviced by a well-appointed family bathroom. The property's location offers excellent connectivity, being within walking distance of Horley train station and a short ten-minute drive to either Redhill or Reigate
