Tucked within a handsome Edwardian conversion, this charming one-bedroom first-floor apartment strikes just the right balance between character and convenience—complete with its own parking space.

Inside, the flat feels airy and inviting, with generous proportions that make it ideal for unwinding after a long day or hosting a few friends for dinner. The separate kitchen means you can cook in peace (and leave the washing up out of sight until later).

When summer rolls around, the shared garden becomes the perfect spot to relax outdoors with a drink or chat with neighbours. And unlike many central Redhill homes, you won't have to worry about where to park—there's an allocated space ready for you.

Location-wise, it's hard to beat. The train station and town centre are just a few minutes' walk away, putting shops, cafés, and commuter links right on your doorstep. Fancy a change of scene? A quick drive to Reigate offers leafy walks around Priory Park and a great choice of coffee spots.

And for those easy Sunday afternoons, the Home Cottage pub at the end of the road is practically calling your name—perfect for hearty food, good company, and a well-earned unwind.
