OUTSIDE:

Renowned for its 18th century Grotto and four follies - The Rose Tower, The Fish Tower, The Obelisk, and Jack the Treacle Eater – Barwick House is a magnificent Grade II listed country house with a long history. Built circa 1770 it was a family home up until the mid 20th Century, after which it was used variously as a prisoner of war camp and a US army base during World War II. In the post war years it became a private school before later falling into disrepair. The house was restored and reoccupied in 1994 and has five private dwellings. Full restoration of the estate, including the construction of nine cottages, were completed a few years later.

Barwick House is approached via a beautiful tree-lined drive, accessed via attractive electronic wrought iron gates, that meanders through the grounds to the main house and parking area, with beautiful countryside views along the way. The owners of Flat 5 Barwick House have full access to the 22 acres of grounds in which the house stands. The beautiful gardens include a lake and 18th-century grotto. A management fee of £530 pcm is payable for use and maintenance of the grounds and estate.

The flat benefits from two allocated parking spaces plus use of additional visitor parking.
