General

The Sycamores forms part of The Old Waterworks, situated in 0.7 acres of stunning private ground and panoramic countryside views between the sought after villages of Milton and Foremark, Derbyshire.

Originally built in 1896 as two workers cottages but later converted into offices for The Waterworks. The site was sympathetically converted into five luxury country homes in 1999 offering a wealth of flexible accommodation, retaining a wealth of original features to include the high ceilings, magnificent sash windows and spacious rooms typical of the period.

The Accommodation

This exceptional period home has been lovingly maintained and updated over the last 26 years of ownership, laid across two floors with UPVC double glazing and oil fired heating throughout. Enter into the centrepiece to the home, being the dining hall with feature Chesney cast iron stove, laid on a slate hearth with ornate Adams style surround. The dining area boasts a double aspect of the grounds and leads into the bespoke country kitchen with a range of hardwood eye and base units, double thickness granite work surfaces, centre island bar with under unit storage and a breakfast bar. There is Rangemaster range cooker, integrated dishwasher and an enamel Belfast sink with a period mixer tap over. The utility room offers further units, with space and plumbing for washing machine and tumble dryer. The cloakroom is also located off the dining hall, as well as the formal sitting room a second Chesney multifuel burner, and two sets of double doors leading into the courtyard terrace to the southerly aspect. The snug area which features a coal effect gas fire with marble hearth gives access into the lovely hardwood double glazed Amdega garden room with marble tiled floor coverings and French doors to the garden terrace. Located off the impressive split staircase are four double bedrooms, all with fitted bedroom furniture, a family bathroom with the main bedroom boasting en suite facilities and a double balcony overlooking neighbouring countryside.
