Property Introduction

Approached by a private lane with access to the property via an electric gate, a sweeping driveway leads to a detached garage with additional carport and further parking. From the south elevation the property enjoys a delightful rural aspect extending to the side elevation overlooking the formal gardens and additional parkland style grounds in the region of seven and a half acres abutting a natural stream which feeds into a lake making this a truly one-off opportunity for buyers looking for their own private space.

This tranquil setting also has the convenience of being within close proximity to the north coast as well as the A30, approximately ten minutes driving distance away. With its commanding elevated position, Goonzoyle Farm was constructed approximately nine years ago with great attention to detail and a quality finish is evident with exposed granite to the exterior and an impressive entrance hallway with oak staircase just two of the features the property has to offer.

In brief, the accommodation comprises of a feature lounge with wood burner, sitting room, wet room, generous kitchen diner with integrated appliances, separate utility room, boot room, walk in larder, conservatory while to the first floor are four further bedrooms, one having a jack and jill style bathroom, family bathroom and the principal bathroom having an en-suite plus large walk-in dressing room.

Externally can be found a freezer room with adjoining cloakroom, double garage with gateway giving access to the extensive gardens and grounds.

Location

Kehelland is a small rural hamlet located in an 'Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty', north west to the town of Camborne.

It is ideally situated for access to the beautiful and majestic north coast famed for its dramatic rugged coastline and breathtaking views and has excellent surfing beaches on the door step, such as Gwithian. The maritime town of Falmouth offers excellent sailing waters and has an excellent reputation being an ideal coastline for water sports as well as being home to the maritime museum.

The cathedral city of Truro lies approximately nineteen miles distant, this being the main shopping centre in Cornwall, with its interesting Georgian architecture together with its cobbled streets and three spired cathedral making it a popular destination for visitors looking to explore our small city.

The main A30 trunk road is situated nearby, therefore making access to and from the county that much easier, along with a main land railway station to London Paddington located at Camborne.
