Location

Hanbury Village, situated 7 miles between Burton upon Trent and Uttoxeter, is a charming headland that rises 250ft above the Dove Valley, offering picturesque views of the beautiful rolling landscape, adjacent to the River Dove towards the Weaver Hills and Derbyshire Dales. While Hanbury isn't directly on a main road, the A50 is situated 2 miles to the north at Sudbury offers quick access to the M6 to the west and the M1 to the east.

The village is defined by the 13th Century Parish Church of St Werburgh and the nearby Water Tower, both of which make it a unique destination. Hanbury is primarily an agricultural area, and much of the land on the outskirts of the Parish belongs to The Duchy of Lancaster.

Hanbury Village is home to several buildings of historical importance, including The Thatches, a 15th Century building which was once a public house, and The Cock Inn, which was destroyed in 1944 by the Fauld explosion. Despite rebuilding two pubs after the war, the brewery mistakenly swapped the building plans, placing The Cock Inn in a small village in Hanbury instead of on a housing estate in Birmingham where it was intended.

The village offers plenty of activities and clubs for residents to enjoy, like gardening, cricket, bowls, badminton, singing, acting, and keep-fit classes. With easy access to numerous public footpaths, including walks that connect to villages like Tutbury, Fauld crater and Draycott in the Clay, Hanbury Village is a beautiful destination that offers something for everyone.

Accommodation

As you enter through the original Oak front entrance door, adorned with a central glazed diamond-shaped stained glass pane, you are greeted by a hallway featuring stunning Oak parquet flooring. The hallway also showcases a striking staircase with solid original Oak banister leading to the first floor, an under stairs WC/cloakroom, a beautiful stained glass window, elegant coving on the ceiling, and a decorative archway.
