It leads to large concrete yard and a large block-concrete and portal steel agricultural barn which measures approximately 18m x 15.5m divided into two distinct sections and is designed for agricultural and equestrian use. The residence itself is approached via timber gates, leading down from the main yard. A pretty garden surrounds the property with key block and paved steps leading onto a side patio. This in turn provides access to the front of the house and leads down onto the elevated decking area. Predominantly laid to lawn with borders, well stocked with an array of shrubs, trees and flowering plants. Interestingly to the far side of the house are the remains of a well-preserved walled garden that overlooks the Orangery to the front of the house and the mountains beyond. There is a further lawn with fencing separating the garden from the property's pastureland.

Travelling away for Abergavenny on the A465 Hereford Road and after approximately 4 miles you enter the village of Pandy. Upon seeing a green 'Dutch' barn immediately ahead turn right. Continue along this road for another half a mile. Walterstone Common will be signposted as a turning to the right. Follow this and the driveway to 'Hollyhenge' will be found after about 1.7 miles on the left-hand side.
