34 PARK AVENUE

Nestled in one of Solihull's most coveted locales, this delightful 1930s detached family residence offers an exceptional blend of historical charm and future promise. Beyond its striking arched doorway, the home unfolds with an array of original features including an oak-panelled staircase, enriching its inviting ambiance. The property boasts a versatile layout, comprising five bedrooms, and harnesses the potential for significant enhancement with planning permission for a substantial ground floor extension. Its proximity to both Malvern and Brueton Parks positions it as an ideal sanctuary for family life, offering a unique opportunity to meld traditional elegance with contemporary living needs.

Entering the home, you're greeted by a welcoming hallway that leads to a generously proportioned living room, seamlessly transitioning into a spacious dining area with views of the expansive rear garden. This space, already brimming with light and warmth, holds the promise of transformation through an approved extension for a large kitchen diner, poised to become the heart of the home.

The existing kitchen, functional and awaiting your vision, is complemented by a utility area and a substantial tandem garage, hinting at further possibilities for conversion. Additionally, a snug second reception room offers a cozy retreat, perfect as a home office or quiet reading nook.

The oak-panelled staircase ascends to the first-floor accommodation, revealing four double bedrooms, each imbued with the home's inherent warmth and character.

The principal bedroom is a haven of tranquillity, featuring an en-suite and access to a large terrace overlooking the verdant garden, providing a serene spot for morning coffees or evening relaxation.

The converted loft space on the top floor presents an ideal area for teenagers or guests, affording them privacy and independence

The garden is a testament to the property's overall charm and potential. Spanning nearly a third of an acre, it offers a private and safe outdoor space for relaxation and play.

The generous size accommodates ambitions for a garden room, an outdoor kitchen, or a children's play area, tailoring the space to your family's needs. The tandem garage, running the length of the house, presents further opportunity for creative adaptation, whether as additional living space or for hobbies.
