Set in the middle of the popular Wiltshire village of Figheldean on a no-through lane, Cleeve House is a remarkable Victorian village house originally associated with the local church and more recently as a care home from which it was converted by the owners to its current wonderful condition. Special attention has been given to ensuring many of the period features have been restored and/or enhanced providing a wonderful feel of heritage whilst enjoying the space, light and high ceilings.

The hall is a particular feature of the property showing off some wonderful workmanship which extends through the old part of the house, to include: a stunning patterned clay tile floor, a mixture of arches over the doorways in the hall are of particular interest and the timber framework around the staircase, various stain glass windows bringing coloured beams of light and carved structural ceiling beams.

The main property is set over three storeys with a cellar, there are three key reception rooms and a very large modern open plan kitchen on the ground floor as well as a large boot room, as well as a utility room and downstairs WC. The first floor has four double bedrooms and three bathrooms (two ensuite). Stairs wind up to the 2nd floor and a fifth double bedroom and a study/small bedroom.

There are both internal connecting doors and two outside doors to the annexe which is a more modern building comprising of a very large open plan living space incorporating the kitchen/ diner and sitting room. There are six double bedrooms and two bathrooms as well as two separate WCs.
