Stepping inside this former public house, the sense of space and character is immediately apparent. Original features run throughout the property, with exposed timber beams, reclaimed materials, and textured finishes giving each room a strong identity while allowing for flexible modern use.

The ground floor is centred around a generous lounge and games room, a standout space that reflects the building's history while functioning comfortably as a main living area. Exposed beams frame the room, complemented by wood flooring and a feature fireplace fitted with a wood-burning stove. A fitted bar area sits neatly within the space, complete with built-in shelving, cabinetry, and wall-mounted dispensers, creating a natural focal point for entertaining without overpowering the room.

Leading on is a separate reception room currently used as a dining room and home office. Parquet flooring continues here, and an original cast iron range is set within the chimney breast, retained as a decorative feature that adds further character and visual interest.

The kitchen and breakfast room have been finished with reclaimed timber cabinetry and copper detailing, paired with tiled flooring for practicality. A freestanding range-style cooker with extractor hood is in place, and there is space provided for additional appliances. The layout offers ample work surface and storage, along with room for informal dining, making it a functional and sociable space.

Stairs rise to the first floor, where three well-proportioned double bedrooms are arranged off the landing. Each bedroom retains exposed beams and reclaimed detailing, with individual layouts shaped by the building's original structure.

Outside, the property benefits from a raised decked seating area, offering a defined outdoor space suitable for relaxing or entertaining. To the rear, there is off-road parking for two to three vehicles on a shared driveway, along with access to a single garage, providing secure parking or additional storage.

Overall, this is a distinctive and spacious home that successfully retains the character of its former use while offering practical and flexible accommodation. Positioned within the village of Shipdham, the property enjoys access to local amenities, schooling, and everyday services, with Dereham and Watton both within approximately ten minutes by car.
