

PALAZZO FATINELLI
LUCCA, TUSCANY

Palazzo Fatinelli History

This grand historic residence is ideally located in a peaceful yet central position within Lucca's historic centre. Palazzo Fatinelli was built in the early 1500s for Cardinal Fatinelli and later used by Napoleon during his campaign through Italy.

For centuries, it remained one of the great palaces of Lucca and home to influential families before being taken into state ownership following the Second World War to be used as the Ministry of Health for the greater Pisa & Lucca area. Over the last decade, it has returned to a private residence and has been thoughtfully restored and modernised.

Where history meets luxury and modernity

With illustrious walls and a cavernous entrance, an imperial staircase ascends to the second floor, where this spectacular apartment is situated. Also accessible by a lift, the apartment, set over one level, offers beautifully proportioned light rooms with high ceilings throughout.

It comprises a large living room, a generous open-plan kitchen with a dining area, a principal bedroom suite with an en suite bathroom, and a study that could serve as a second bedroom with a guest bathroom. The apartment also benefits from a private parking space.
