Nestled in the heart of the Tresaith valley, the property boasts captivating views stretching down to the sea. Inside, it balances rustic features like exposed stone walls and original wooden details with thoughtful updates designed to take in the surrounding scenery.

The home opens to a welcoming entrance hall, leading to various ground-floor rooms. The living room, rich with character, features exposed stone walls and a substantial fireplace fitted with a log burner, although it isn't in use. A second unused log burner can be found in the dining room, adding character to this versatile space. The kitchen, split into two distinct areas, offers plenty of storage with base and wall units. A gas range cooker is the focal point of the primary kitchen, while the second kitchen area benefits from garden views and provides additional counter space, a one-and-a-half sink with a drainer, and a dishwasher.

Off the kitchen, the rear hall with its original wooden panelling gives access to a snug with exposed stone walls, creating an intimate space for relaxation. The rear hall also leads to the back porch, which is practical in design, offering space and plumbing for a washing machine and tumble dryer. The property's extension seamlessly enhances its functionality and takes advantage of the views. Double doors from the extension's kitchen area open onto a decked terrace, showcasing sweeping valley and sea views. From here, a door leads to a spacious lounge with its own set of double doors to the decking, making it a perfect spot for entertaining or relaxing. The extension also includes a wet room and a staircase to the master suite. The master bedroom is a standout feature of the property, boasting a glazed wall with double doors opening onto a private balcony. From this vantage point, the valley and sea views beyond.
