About The Property

Looking for a charming village home with character features and a garden that works across the seasons? This updated three-bedroom house in St Dogmaels offers just that, with comfortable living, a generous rear garden, and easy access to Poppit Sands and the Cardigan Bay coastline in West Wales.

Right in the centre of St Dogmaels, this three-bedroom terrace has been thoughtfully updated while keeping plenty of character in place. It's one of those properties that makes good use of its space, with original features like exposed floorboards, and decorative touches that sit neatly alongside modern comforts.

From the street, the house is set slightly back behind a metal gate and low-walled frontage, giving a bit of usable space in front of the door. Inside, there's a small inner porch, then a glass door into a hallway with a lovely ceiling arch, wooden floors, and access to the rooms downstairs. The front-facing living room is bright and simple, with a sash-style window, feature fireplace, and those floorboards continuing through.

The kitchen sits at the rear and feels like the centre of the house. There's a view out to the garden, and space for a table, making it somewhere that works well for day-to-day life. Units run along one wall with a single sink and a gas cooker recessed into a small inglenook, with extractor above. The fridge-freezer is tucked in neatly, and there's a useful walk-in pantry under the stairs for those who need a bit of extra storage. The gas boiler is mounted on the wall here too, running the central heating and hot water.

From the kitchen, a boot room leads out to the back garden – a handy space for coats and shoes, and also the way through to the separate utility room. In the utility, there's a second W/C, a sink unit, tumble dryer, and space and plumbing for a washing machine. Altogether, the downstairs layout flows well, with everything practical in easy reach but not on top of each other.

Upstairs, the landing gives access to two bedrooms and the bathroom.

The main bedroom is to the front – a decent-sized double, again with original wooden floors and a second feature fireplace, this one with a slate hearth and cast-iron surround. A pair of windows bring in lots of natural light.

Bedroom two (single) sits at the back of the house, looking out over the garden and features exposed floorboards. The bathroom is functional and straightforward – tilled floor, corner shower, sink with unit, W/C, and a view over the garden.

A further door on the landing leads up to the attic bedroom, which adds real flexibility to the property. It's currently used as a third bedroom, with exposed beams, timber floors, and a set of Velux windows offering a view out over the garden and beyond to the church tower.

Externally:

Outside, the rear garden works across a few levels. Just out the back door is a small, paved area with some handy storage, then a set of steps leads up to a patio space – ideal for a table and chairs, barbecue, or just somewhere to sit and relax. Beyond that, a lawn stretches out towards a final gravelled seating area with views to the rear. It’s not overworked, but there’s room for someone to garden or just keep it simple and tidy.

St Dogmaels is a popular village with a lot going for it – the riverside setting, its ruined abbey, and a strong community feel with regular events and groups running through the year. Everything needed day to day is within walking distance – shop, post office, school, and pubs – and the nearby town of Cardigan offers more choice when needed. Poppit Sands is just a short drive away, sitting at the edge of Cardigan Bay in West Wales, with miles of sand and space to enjoy at any time of year.

This property combines convenience and character in a village that’s always in demand, with practical updates already taken care of. There’s good space inside and out, and the kind of setting that works well for full-time living or as a slower-paced second home.
