About The Property

Looking for a solid home with sea views and scope to add value? This ex-local authority property offers generous parking, gardens front and back, and a fantastic coastal outlook across Cardigan Bay – all set in a handy West Wales village location close to daily essentials.

Set in a convenient village location with everyday amenities within walking distance, this home has the fundamentals in place – sea views, a solid layout, plenty of parking – and it's ready for a new owner to put their stamp on it.

Access is via a private gateway opening onto a drive with space for several vehicles. The traditional front door leads into the hallway, but for daily life, the side entrance through the porch is far more practical. From here, there's access to both the utility space and the kitchen, keeping muddy boots and bags neatly tucked out of the way.

The kitchen itself is fitted with a selection of wall and base units, with a stainless steel sink placed beneath the window that looks out to the coast. There's also a walk-in pantry for storing groceries and a connecting door into the main lounge. The lounge is a homely space, centred around its original fireplace and with built-in alcove shelving and storage. A window overlooks the rear garden, and with a bit of budget, this could be transformed with the addition of patio doors – opening up the space to link directly with the garden outside.

A second reception room sits at the front of the house. This is currently used as a sitting room, and again, there's a traditional fireplace and a sea-facing window which draws in the coastal light.

From the lounge, a door leads into the central hallway, where stairs rise to the first floor and another door opens to the front of the property.

Details Continued:

Upstairs, the layout is simple and functional. The landing has a window looking out to the coast. There are three bedrooms in total: one double and one single to the rear, both with views over the garden and the neighbouring fields, and another double to the front which makes the most of the coastal aspect – and it's here the sea views really come into their own, with an uninterrupted outlook stretching all the way up towards north Wales. The shower room includes a corner shower unit, WC, and wash basin, along with an airing cupboard housing the hot water tank and some handy shelving.

Back down through the side porch, the utility area makes good use of the space. There's room and plumbing for a washing machine, a wash hand basin, the oil-fired boiler is found here, and a door into a downstairs WC. This area links through to a useful corridor with a built-in storage shed and then into the attached garage – which has power, lighting, and an up-and-over door.

Externally:

From the same corridor, there's access out to the rear garden. The front garden is made up of a mix of driveway and lawn, bordered on one side by mature hedging that offers some privacy from the lane. At the back, the rear garden is enclosed and mainly laid to grass, with established hedging and shrubs around the edges and open countryside beyond. A few paths lead through the space, and just outside the lounge window there's an ideal spot for a paved seating area, which would really tie the house and garden together if patio doors were added.

The location is another strong point – the village itself sits in West Wales along the coast, with a bus route through and a handy supermarket and café nearby. The sea views are a constant reminder of the setting, with Cardigan Bay just on the doorstep and the potential here to bring the house up to modern standards and enjoy everything this stretch of coast has to offer.
