About The Property

Looking for a historic coastal cottage with uninterrupted sea views from the garden and genuine character? Set above Cardigan Bay in the old village core of Aberporth, this 4-bedroom home with additional stone-built former boathouse offers a rare position and exciting potential, all within reach of West Wales' stunning coastline.

Sitting just above the shoreline and within walking distance to the beaches and the village green, in the original part of Aberporth, this character-filled cottage dates back several hundred years and offers one of the area's most iconic backdrops — views over Cardigan Bay, with the coastline stretching north and westward. The plot includes not only the main house but also a detached garage, store shed, and a separate single-room stone outbuilding, formerly a boathouse and now used as a games room with mezzanine for guests.

The property is accessed from a no-through road, with a shared entrance leading onto its own driveway and parking for 2–3 vehicles. The garage stands separately just outside the back door — handy for storage or even conversion, subject to consent — while the generous garden areas run behind and to the side of the house, framing those standout sea views while offering further possibilities.

Built originally with Clom (Cob) and extended over the years in stone and brick covered mostly in a lime render, the cottage has a lovely, natural feel. Original features remain in place throughout the house, including exposed beams, fireplaces, slate finishes and deep windowsills. The property is ready for modernisation, and there's clear scope to upgrade the heating and layout to suit individual needs, without losing the charm that makes it so appealing.

Entry to the house is possible from both front and back, though the rear entrance tends to be the more practical day-to-day access. The back porch has tiled flooring, space for laundry appliances, and links to a useful downstairs WC with a butler sink and high-level cistern.

Details Continued:

The adjoining utility room has a slate shelf, space for a freestanding fridge freezer, and houses the gas boiler.

The kitchen, which connects directly from here, includes a stainless steel sink with drainer, wall and base cabinets, worktops, and space for a dishwasher and cooker. A door from the kitchen leads into the heart of the home — the sitting room — where exposed timber beams and a wood-burning stove create a welcoming feel. A staircase rises from this room to the first floor, and a door leads through to the lounge/diner.

In the dining section, there's space for a family table, which opens out — with a step down — into the main lounge. Another wood burner sits here on a slate hearth with a brick surround, and through the front-facing window are views through to the beach, framed by the neighbouring homes.

Upstairs, the landing feels unusually generous, with a rear window framing sea views and providing good natural light. There's also a built-in storage cupboard and access to the attic. Four bedrooms lead off this landing — two to the front and two to the rear — along with a bathroom and separate WC.

The main bedroom faces the front and enjoys lovely views down to the sea, with a feature fireplace adding interest. The second front-facing bedroom includes a wash basin and offers good proportions for guests or family. To the rear are a double room and a single — both benefitting from open outlooks over the garden and the water beyond.

The bathroom is fitted with a wash basin and a bath with shower over, while the separate WC next door means it works well for family living.

Externally:

Outside, there’s a lot to explore. Just beyond the kitchen is a compact courtyard with a woodstore, and from here steps lead up to a further lawned area. Opposite the rear door is the garage, with a practical storage section to the rear. A second set of double gates opens to the top lawn — a private space behind the house with sweeping views out to sea. Hedging offers some shelter and privacy without taking away from the setting, which is undoubtedly one of the highlights of the property. Sunsets here are often spectacular. It’s worth noting that there’s currently no fencing between the garden and the cliff edge, so sensible care is needed when visiting or planning outdoor use. This generous space offers further exciting possibilities, subject to obtaining the necessary planning permissions etc.

One of the more unusual features is the old stone boathouse, currently used as a games room. It’s a single open-plan space with a mezzanine sleeping area above and outstanding views from its slightly elevated position. While it needs updating, the potential is clear — whether as guest space, a studio, or a work-from-home spot.

It’s rare to find a coastal property that has kept its sense of place and history while offering such flexibility for the future.
