17 Northwall Road

What is best described as an honest home that probably hasn't been chopped and changed in all its lifetime, in need of a modernisation programme, but offering fantastic potential. This three-bedroom terraced property retains some fine period features such as the fireplaces in each room, with the added benefit of a recently installed combination boiler and double glazing that appear to be in good condition, making a good head start for any potential buyer.

Internally: There is an entrance hall with doors into the front lounge and a separate dining room, the kitchen is fairly original and there was a thought that taking down the wall that separates it to the dining room, will make a great open planned entertaining area. (Subject to planning). Upstairs there are three bedrooms (2 doubles) and a bathroom again in its original form, but like the rest of the home, having so much potential.

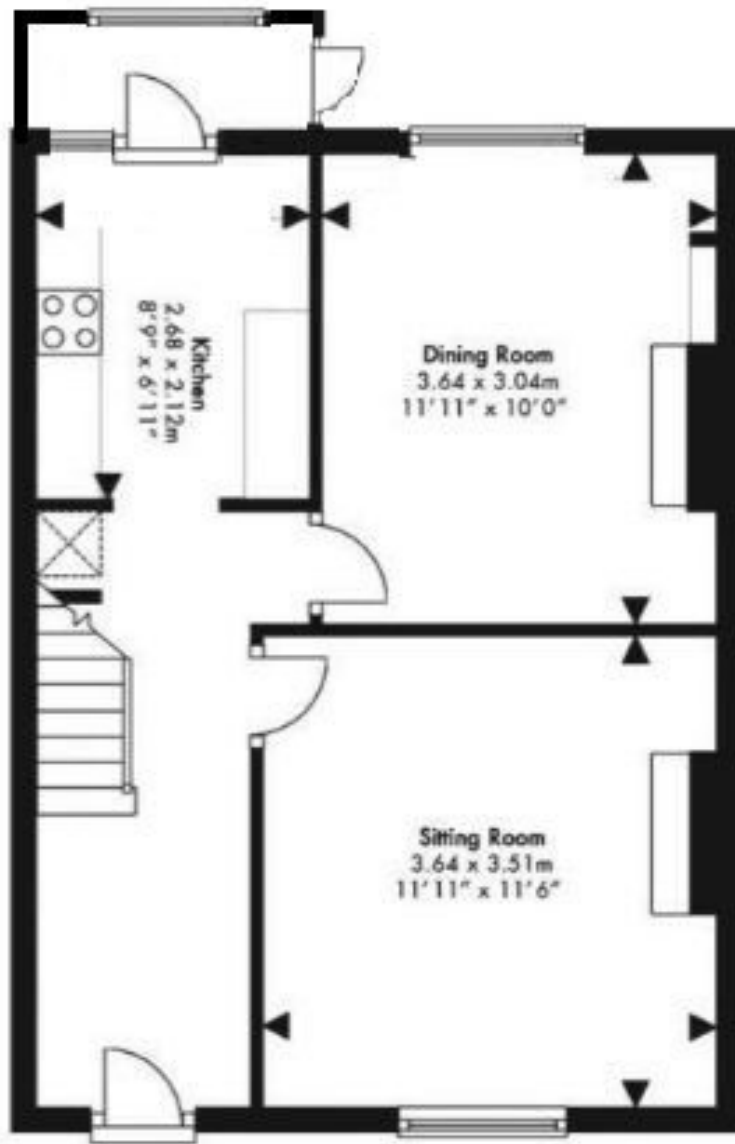

Externally: The gardens are a true highlight, in excess of 100 feet, with again lots of potential and ideas.
