Location

The village of Titley lies in a sheltered, verdant position in the Arrow valley, some three miles equidistant from Kington and Presteigne. The village lies 500 feet above sea level on Offa's Dyke and close to the river Arrow. Approximately 150 adult parishioners occupy some 50 dwellings spread over an area interlaced by old drovers' roads. Titley has a modern and much-used village hall and the much-acclaimed Staggy Inn., which was the first Gastro pub to win the much coveted Michelin star. Titley is still very much a farming community, but with a variety of professional members, artisans and newcomers retired from elsewhere.
