Description: Kingsley House is a detached modern eco house, built in 2014 to a high standard, using structural insulated panels (SIPS). The property was a long time in the planning by the owner, who wanted to design a house that would have a Scandic, open plan feel to optimise the feeling of light and space.

The house utilises features and technologies to minimise the need for maintenance and to maximise the use of space, wall-space and the control of warmth and light. The construction of the house also benefits from an additional layer of insulation and triple glazed doors and windows. The ground floor is underfloor heated and is split into six zones, including the garage. The entire building has the added benefit of an air management and heat recovery system that refreshes the air and recovers the heat, allowing constant and fully controllable temperature upstairs and downstairs with a thermal booster built in if extra heat is ever required. Each zone can be programmed independently if required and to further enhance the feeling of light there is a sun-tube over the staircase.

The accommodation is arranged over two floors and includes on the ground floor an airy entrance hall with a cloakroom and doors leading to a sitting room and kitchen. The ground floor living space is open plan with large windows and includes a sitting room, dining room with study area and a well appointed kitchen, which has an extensive range of gloss wall and base units with Corian work surfaces and sink, a door leading out to the garden and a door leading to the utility room, which also has doors leading out to the garden and to the integral garage. Light and heating have been designed into the garage to enable it to change seamlessly into an office or studio. On the first floor there are three double bedrooms (two have fitted wardrobes), with the master bedroom having an en-suite shower room and a Juliet balcony, which enjoys a lovely outlook over surrounding countryside. There is also a well appointed family bathroom.

Outside there is a gravel drive to the side providing parking for 2 cars which leads to an attached single garage with an electric roller door and an Indian sandstone terrace path leads to the front door. The easy to manage south facing gardens wrap around the house and are mainly laid to lawn with an Indian sandstone terrace and gravel area to the side and rear, which is ideal for outdoor entertaining and for sitting out and enjoying the tranquil setting of the house. To the rear of the house there is a bank with hedging above and the remainder of the garden is enclosed with hedging and fencing.
