The village of Houghton Conquest is ideally located between the Bedfordshire towns of Ampthill and Bedford, both approximately five miles away. These towns offer extensive amenities, including Waitrose stores, schools, and local parks. In Houghton Conquest, you'll find two well-established pub/eateries, a local store with a sub post office, a village hall, Houghton Conquest Lower School, and numerous public footpaths and bridleways. Commuting is convenient, with Bedford providing links to London St Pancras in about forty minutes and Flitwick station, just six miles away, offering regular services that take as little as thirty-five minutes.
