IF YOU LIVED HERE...

You'll be admiring the fine frontage of this Victorian abode – formerly part of a Vicarage – before stepping past your ruby-hued front door with stained glass surround. It's all set back nicely from the road. On into the porch and you'll find on-trend terracotta flowing underfoot through to your lounge. In here you've a sizeable 170 square feet of space, with leafy street views through twin windows, timber floorboards and a period fireplace in the chimney breast. Elsewhere, a handy WC is tucked away past the stairs.

Next up is your kitchen/diner. A real show-stopper, it's 180 square feet with refined juniper walls, a chef's oven, contrasting black and white cabinets and herringbone flooring. A covetable dining area sits underneath pendant lighting, while to the rear, floor-to-ceiling patio doors usher in natural light and open out to steps down to your courtyard garden. Out here's a patio with lattice screening – a fine spot for cradling a steaming coffee in the morning.

Head back inside and up the stairs you'll find three understated and tranquil double bedrooms, each with built-in storage. Your principal sleeper's a truly spacious 185 square feet, with bare floorboards, a picture rail and twin windows. Lastly, your family bathroom comes with a shower over the tub, a trough sink with two taps, twin mirrored cabinets, plus more delectable terracotta flooring.

Outside and Turnpike Lane station is a three minute leafy stroll away for easy shuttles into the capital courtesy of the Piccadilly line. Kings Cross station's four stops away, and Leicester Square seven, making the West End less than half an hour away. The amenities of Turnpike Lane and Wood Green are a short stroll, and Hornsey sits westwards. For that village feel cut through Hornsey station at the end of your road and jump on the 41 bus, this will take you to the quaint and timeless Crouch End for The Arthouse cinema, artisanal stores, and fine dining establishments.

WHAT ELSE?

- For your new local head to Green Lanes to be at Jam in a Jar in six minutes. With live music, signature cocktails and mouth-wateringly authentic Portuguese cuisine, this is bound to be your new favourite place.
- Your new home comes chain free, so you can move in as soon as it's convenient.
- Thirty two schools rated 'Good' or better by Ofsted sit in a one mile radius of this handsome abode. Seven of these have 'Outstanding' status, including The Grove School, twelve minutes' walk away.

A WORD FROM THE OWNER...

"This converted vicarage makes for truly special home. We were so thankful that it maintained its Victorian charming features from the original wood floors to the front hall tiles and swinging double doors that would have received the vicar's guests. We did our best to honour the original details in the renovations we undertook; From the original Victorian encaustic red tiles inspiring the new terracotta tiles in the bathrooms, to the green kitchen being inspired by uncovering unsalvageable dark green casein paint on the walls, We've attempted to maintain its history while making the necessary updates in a contemporary way.

The building itself has an interesting history; It was originally the vicarage for the church next door, but the current church itself was actually historically the building the housed the Sunday School as part of a larger building that sat on the corner of Hampden Road. From community records, I have found that the church burned down in the 1970's and was parcelled off and developed into a version of the apartment building that now exists. The Sunday School was then converted to serve as the worship hall and the vicarage was sold off to become a private residence. It only had two previous owners before us since then, each owner keeping it for around 20 years. The church next door holds service every Sunday and you can hear the gentle sound of singing and organs from a relaxing Sunday-morning soak in the bath."
