VETRO LONDON

A hidden gem in the capital, Narrow Street serves up the original Thames-side experience.

RIVERSIDE WALKS
From Canary Wharf to Narrow Street, the picturesque walks along the River Thames are dotted with restaurants and pubs.

A short stroll from Vetro is a place of time-worn charm. Narrow Street is the oldest part of Limehouse and a true attraction for those looking for that authentic experience in the capital. Dotted among the rare 18th-century brick terraces, impossibly old taverns and newer gastropubs line the edge of the Thames, jostling with the custom that this area has always enjoyed. The street's most precious occupant is The Grapes, a 1720 pub of pint-sized proportions that Charles Dickens and Samuel Pepys would famously frequent. From The Prospect of Whitby, closer to St Katharine Docks, to Gordon Ramsay's The Narrow just ten-minute walk from Vetro, you can savour traditional dishes topped with river views and a helping of London's rich history.

THE PROSPECT OF WHITBY

Enjoy a drink on a glorious summer's day at London's oldest riverside pubs dating back to 1520.

A rich history of trade and discovery.

A

Although there are now few signs of its past, the area surrounding Vetro was London's original Chinatown. In the late 19th Century, Chinese employees of the East India Company settled on the edge of the world's busiest docks and set up businesses to cater for their home sailors who travelled across the seas to trade silks, teas and spices. By 1910, a thriving community had formed around a collection of cafés, restaurants, laundrettes, shops and lodges creating the first Chinese quarter in the capital. Today, traces have all but disappeared but there is romance in the notion that these streets once echoed the sounds of spice traders from the ancient Orient – a secret heritage that instils great wonder and surprise.

Where spices and timbers, silks, rhubarb and teas arrived from an imperial land.

SUMPTUOUS AND SOPHISTICATED HOMES

A delicate and reflective silhouette on the skyline.

IAN SIMPSON
SimpsonHaugh

Founding partner of Vetrol architects SimpsonHaugh, Ian Simpson describes the building's design as a tale of two halves, the 'podium' and the 'spire'.

The materiality of the building transitions from traditional brick to a slender vertical component of shimmering glass. Connected by a shared garden on the seventh floor that invites all residents from above and below, the two distinctive parts to the building are direct responses to their immediate context. The lower 'podium' levels are locked into their urban setting whilst the tower is designed to maximise reflection and the light of the sky. Comfort can be drawn from the familiarity of the textured grain whilst from a distance the glazing of the 'spire' intends to minimise interruption by mirroring the day that surrounds it.

"To complement the skyline, we've introduced increasingly wide, highly reflective reveals to the upper levels so that the building captures the light and is constantly changing. We didn't want to create something that absorbed the light but rather played with it, reflecting the time of day and all the seasons. We believe it's this interaction that truly brings the building to life."

LOBBY

Warm tones and complementary textures create a striking sense of arrival.

PODIUM GARDEN

Spanning across all of level 7, the podium garden will be an oasis for all to enjoy.

GYM & SAUNA

Fulfilling a desire for health and wellness, Vetro homes its own in-house gym and sauna on level 8.

Satiating the desire for wellness in the capital, Vetro offers a portfolio of amenities that grants new heights of healthy-living to its residents and guests. Not only do the impressive podium gardens, stretching out above the city, offer outdoor space and fresh air amid glorious views, the in-house gym provides a professional fitness arena in which to exercise, strengthen and tone. Complemented by a sauna, luxurious shower and relaxation area, the facilities here verge on those of a London spa. A concierge service will welcome all guests at the immaculately designed lobby whilst being on hand to make residents' lives run smoothly.

PODIUM GARDEN

Immaculately landscaped, residents will be able to enjoy views and tranquillity whilst having an outdoor space to exercise.

The creation of Vetro is a truly purposeful one. "This is a building which shares the strong ambition and grander vision of Canary Wharf, and represents a real opportunity to reflect those aspirations, values, qualities and activities at this gateway point just north of the DLR" states Rachel Haugh.

Bringing her signature style to the interiors at Vetro, Sanna Wennberg, adds "This is a place full of industrial and maritime history – so it's about invention, craftsmanship, spirit and adventure and we've sought to represent this in the materiality of the interiors. From the point of arrival in the sumptuous entrance hall through all common areas, dark atmospheric marine tones, and natural materials such as wood, bronze and brass are referenced. Together, they echo the colours and textures found amongst historic sea charts, Admiralty uniforms and the sterling ambiance of the Captain's cabin." Applying the same range of materials, but in lighter hues across the inset balcony or wintergarden, the space forms a peaceful oasis to relax and unwind with uninterrupted views of Canary Wharf, The City and beyond.

Rachel Haugh, half of the founding duo at SimpsonHaugh, explains how Vetro will become a significant marker for East London.

“Representing historic adventure and spirit.”

LIVING & DINING
The expansive open-plan living room with full-height glazing maximises space.

KITCHEN & DINING
Bespoke and modern designer kitchens with marble effect splashbacks and sleek fittings are designed to the highest standard.

LIVING & DINING
Naturally bright and flooded with light from the floor-to-ceiling windows, the balcony offers spectacular views for a calm backdrop.

BEDROOM
Neutral tones create the perfect canvas for the residents' interior vision.

66 Timeless style and beautifully functional.

BATHROOM

Feature mosaic tiles and modern brassware create a stylish and contemporary design.

Living spaces for modern city dwellers, the interiors at Vetro have been crafted to offer beautifully functional yet luxurious rooms in which to rest and play. From the plush cosiness of the cabin-style lobby to the naturally bright apartments, every fine detail has been considered and meticulously applied. In the apartments, the maritime influences are present but elegantly toned down. Exquisite oak floors stretch across the open-plan kitchen and lounge area whilst neutral countertops allow the grain to show through to offer authenticity and texture. Bathrooms are light and fresh with white marble surfaces, contrasted black towel rails and superior fittings. Bedrooms benefit from the comfort of soft yet enduring carpet, premium fitted wardrobes and sensational views.

On entry, long views across the main space towards the inset balcony or wintergarden include the same range of materials but in lighter hues, offering a calm and timeless backdrop to the individual style of the resident. From the surface treatment of the floors to the refined quality of the kitchen fittings, complementary texture, grain and detail have been combined to play with the light and create soft shadows and highlights that vary continuously throughout the day.

Sumptuous design, rich materials and calming tones work together in a perfect arrangement of contemporary cool.

Refined quality combined with rich textures.
