A fantastic furnished studio flat situated on the third floor set within a fabulous historical development and featuring spacious reception room, modern open-plan kitchen and large bathroom.

The property benefits from double glazed windows, high ceiling and 24 hours concierge.

The former Ministry of Pensions building, Bromyard House, was built in the early 1920s to accommodate 6,000 staff. The architect was Sir James Grey West OBE, who also designed the Royal Air Force College at Cranwell, Lincolnshire and worked on the National Portrait Gallery. As a government building, Bromyard House later housed Social Services and the DVLA before being sold off for conversion into residential apartments.

Bromyard Avenue is conveniently located within a great selection of shops and amenities on Uxbridge Road. Westfield shopping centre is nearby. While the motorist will find easy access to the A40 (M) for routes in and out of London.
