A larger-than-average family home of 2,175 sq ft, this elegant four-bedroom property on Chandos Road combines period character with modern practicality in a superbly convenient setting.

The ground floor centres around a striking 28ft kitchen diner — nearly nine metres in length — opening onto a garden approaching 60ft, creating a remarkable space for family living and entertaining. At the front, a bay-fronted reception room showcases fireplaces, decorative cornicing, and ceiling mouldings, while a separate study and a wine cellar provide further versatility.

Upstairs, four double bedrooms are arranged across the upper levels, including a loft conversion, complemented by two family bathrooms.

Adding to its appeal, the house benefits from solar panels that reduce utility costs and generate an annual return, making it both a stylish and practical choice. The location is equally compelling, with Willesden Green Station and Gladstone Park each only an eight-minute walk away.
