The Property

Willow Tree Cottage is detached, with origins probably dating back to the mid/late 18th Century and with more recent additions. Built in a traditional style of local Cotswold stone with natural stone tiles to the main front roof slope, it stands in a lovely quiet, elevated position. It has a particularly attractive facade with a central porch and two gabled dormers. The cottage is not listed, but it does lie within the Chedworth Conservation Area and is in an area of outstanding natural beauty. At one stage, it served as the village Station Master's house and in the back garden remain stone steps cut into the former railway embankment via which they would have gone to work.

Internally, the well presented accommodation is arranged over two floors and benefits from double glazed windows throughout. Care has been taken to preserve as much of the original charm and character as possible, and period features include exposed beams and roof timbers, an inglenook fireplace with a seat, an original spiral staircase with exposed stone curved wall and a stone mullioned window. The accommodation is flexible; in particular, the dining room is a great all-purpose room that could serve as a playroom or ground floor bedroom, if required.

There is a delightful study area on a half landing with fitted shelving, and on the first floor are two excellent double bedrooms with well appointed en suites. In the bathroom to the principal bedroom, a secret doorway provides access to a dressing room/occasional child's bedroom with sloping ceilings.

Gardens

A short cobbled drive flanked by retained flower beds leads up from the village lane under an impressive hornbeam arch to a gravelled car parking and turning area in front of the cottage. There is an area of lawn with an ornamental pond and a small greenhouse to the side of the drive, and the front is well screened by a mature hornbeam hedge. A path leads around to the rear of the cottage under a vine clad trellis, and steps lead up to a paved terrace, an ideal place for outside entertaining. Adjoining the terrace is a useful Cotswold stone outbuilding. The rear garden is also very private and backs on to a meadow. It comprises an area of lawn and a wooded bank, which was part of the old railway embankment. There is a further raised flagstone paved sitting area behind the shed from which there is a lovely view across the meadow to the church beyond.
