HISTORICAL INTEREST:

The property is thought to have been constructed around the early 1500s and the date that really launched Gayhurst House into the history books was 1581 when Queen Elizabeth I gifted the estate to Sir Francis Drake. The property was then owned by Sir Everard Digby and his wife in the early 1600s where it is recalled for its famous involvement in the Gunpowder plot and Guy Fawkes who is thought to have visited the property. Gayhurst House also played a huge part during the Second World War as it was tasked along with Bletchley Park with acting as the base for the intelligence officers who were helping to crack the Enigma Codes. The property has been redesigned and reconfigured throughout history and you will be able to find different features of the property which represents the Tudor, Elizabethan, Queen Anne and Victorian Eras.
