DESCRIPTION

Meresborough School (formerly known as Bryony School) closed after 70 years. The building, which is of traditional flint and brick construction under a tiled roof, historically was the farmhouse to Meresborough Farm located in the sought after hamlet of Meresborough on the outskirts of Rainham in Kent. The building retains many original features including sash windows and, subject to obtaining the necessary planning permissions, the property would lend itself to a number of uses and, subject to planning, could be reinstated as a residential dwelling.

DIRECTIONS

The current accommodation is arranged on 4 levels including a substantial basement area, two floors are currently adapted for use as a school and an under eaves suite of rooms in the loft. The property is extended on the roadside by a single storey barn and store area and in the grounds of the property there is a separate detached brick and tile building.

ACCOMMODATION

The building is on four levels. On the ground and first floor the original living spaces have been adapted to teaching areas with a suite of three rooms either side of a central hallway with the school kitchen and WCs adjoining the classrooms. Stairs lead up to a first floor landing where there are four further generously sized rooms, together with the former school girls' and boys' WCs. The main building accommodation is completed with a mainly dry cellar with original brick floors divided into three rooms with access to an external staircase. In the attic, there are a further two under eaves rooms either side of the staircase.

Outside, there is an attached single storey wing to the main part and detached from the main building is a further single storey traditional building formerly used as teaching spaces.

The site is on the immediate edge of the settlement of Meresborough and the grounds included in the former playing fields and playground extends to 0.71 acres (0.28 hectares).
