This delightful country residence has not come to the open market in excess of 40 years and therefore, it presents a rare opportunity for a new owner to acquire a lovely family home in a secluded rural location with its own land surrounding the pleasant gardens and grounds, together with the added benefit of a very habitable two-bedroomed annexe and large driftway barn that was altered internally many years ago to provide three loose boxes, tack room and substantial garage.

It is assumed that a new owner would look to refurbish and refit throughout, and they may even seek planning consent for some extensions to the Northern elevation, with the aim of providing an excellent family home with many additional features that can be enjoyed over the next two or three decades.

The property is located just half a mile from the centre of Lowsonford village, where you will find the Fleur de Lys public house (known for its award-winning pies!) and village hall. There are roads leading off to Henley-in-Arden to the South-West, Warwick to the East, and Lapworth, Hockley Heath and the Birmingham conurbation to the North.

The property is approached from the lane via a long tarmacadam driveway, with neat curve stones and lawned areas to either side, which leads to the parking area to the front of the garage and to the gates to the pasture fields. The driveway then continues to the front of the main residence. Through the brick wall that adjoins the main residence to the annexe, there is an arched doorway that leads to the rear paved terrace and lawned gardens with a pedestrian gate through to the orchard and paddock beyond. A further pathway leads to a parking area, which gives access to the annexe and 2-bay tractor shed.
