Access: See Sale Plan over

Access to the land is through a very secure double steel gated entrance shared with Southern Water and the Portsmouth Services Fly Fishing Association. On walking down to the 10.46 acres or driving your vehicle, you proceed south, over the established access track for about 200m and then enter the northern end of the land over the Otterbourne Stream culvert, one of the main tributary carriers to the River.

General Description:

The land and its traditional ancient ridge and furrow water meadows is enclosed within a perimeter fence on the western boundary adjacent to the Railway, the eastern boundary onto the bank of the Itchen Navigation and the northeastern boundary onto one of the main tributary carrier streams leading from Otterbourne Manor to the west.

The Itchen Navigation was constructed in the late 17th Century to allow the transport of cargo on barges between Winchester and Southampton; it was also economically important for irrigating the extensive water meadows system along the valley floor, the remnants of which are still evident in this property; locks, sluices and hatches were built to control the water levels and manage flow to the water meadows and nearby mills. The Itchen Navigation was used until 1869 when the London to Southampton Railway was opened and which now forms the western boundary of the property being offered for sale.

The land is currently divided into four stock-fenced enclosures with several field shelters suitable for continued seasonal livestock grazing and animal husbandry.

All the land is designated as part of the Itchen River Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI) adjoins the Itchen Special Area of Conservation (SAC). The original tow path for the Navigation is on the opposite side of the water over which “The Itchen Way” now passes. There is no general public access through any part of the property being offered for sale.

The fishing rights on the River are currently rented by The Portsmouth Services Fly Fishing Association and the riverside banks are maintained by them, leaving about a 1m width of wild bank-side vegetation and then a width of mown grass for easy access. The fishing rights are not included in the sale as they are privately owned.

The Wildlife, Fauna and Flora:

Itchen Water Meadows provides an excellent riverside habitat and has remained largely unchanged for many decades. There are water vole families in residence along the River’s edge and otters are regular visitors; swans and geese nest close to the Navigation and are joined by migrating duck, coots and grebes and other overwintering birds. There is at least one family of kingfishers nesting nearby. The wetland area of the water meadows provides a quality breeding area for the rare Southern Damselfly, mayflies, stoneflies and dragonflies as well as the increasingly rare native white-clawed crayfish.

The Water Meadows themselves are also rich in plant life. Wild flowers including the Southern Marsh Orchid, Water Avenas, Cuckoo flower, Mouse-ear Chickweed, Water Mint, Ragged Robin, Water Forget-me-knot, Common Fleabane and many more species are evident through the Water Meadow which has largely escaped intensive agricultural improvement or drainage.

Potential Uses:

This land has been used for many years for light agricultural grazing and farming but is equally well suited for conservation, biodiversity, seasonal livestock and equestrian grazing, and many other uses, some of which may be subject to planning environmental consents. Portable/mobile field shelters have long been installed on the land and these do provide shelter and security for any livestock.

Planning:

The land lies within the Winchester City Council and their Local Plan Policies apply. The land lies outside any recognised settlement boundary and is considered to be in the “Countryside”.

Current planning regulations permit the use of land for up to 28 days in any calendar year for any purpose including camping and many other recreational uses.

This exceptionally pleasant rural river and waterside property with such a wide range of attractive characteristics and high amenity and historic conservation and environmental value, should appeal to a wide range of aspiring property owners.

The property is registered with HM Land Registry under Title No. HP751121.
