Important

An inspection of fill materials beneath the floors was undertaken in June 2006.

The inspection, consisting of two boreholes, revealed that the fill materials present consisted of mainly gravel with ash or clinker. Problems have arisen in some cases where similar fill materials have contained relatively high water soluble sulphate concentrations. This can give rise to sulphate attack on adjacent concrete and mortar.

The results indicated that a value above the level where sulphate attack on concrete would normally be considered a risk. On the basis of this information from this investigation it is concluded that there is a risk of attack due to elevated sulphate concentrations in some of the fill materials. If sulphate attack did occur it would probably be seen as cracking or heave in the concrete floors. Slight cracking was recorded at the hallway borehole position probably associated with sulphate attack.

Our client has informed that there is visible evidence of heave in the kitchen floor.

Therefore, based upon the above information the property may not be mortgageable in it's current condition. We would advise interested parties to speak to their mortgage broker or lender to clarify whether you are able to raise finance to purchase the property before committing to viewing.

We would advise for any potential buyer to undertake their own due diligence prior to making an offer to purchase.
