The Property

Entering from the communal hallway you are greeted by a naturally lit hallway with ample, functional storage. The dual aspect open plan living space has a beautiful, far-reaching view of the sea and Porth Island. The original fireplace opening has been transformed into a shelved entertainment space. The modern kitchen in the last year has been updated with integrated appliances as well as a central island which allows a flow between the lounge space perfect for entertaining.

The current principal bedroom is cleverly tucked away for privacy and features deep fitted wardrobes. The room has also been used as yoga studio and office with the other bedroom being chosen as the main bedroom as it allows you to wake up with a view. The family bathroom completes the accommodation and is well equipped with a white suite and heated towel rail, plus the option to add additional cupboards.

Externally

The outside shared patio provides the perfect spot for a morning coffee. The apartment has an allocated parking space as well as access to the communal visitors spaces.

Location

Porth Beach is a favourite for families, SUP lovers and swimmers. With its own local boutique, tapas restaurant, cafes and beachside pub, it's sociable without the crowds of the town centre. You'll find Watergate Beach and Lusty Glaze in opposite directions via the picturesque coastal path. You'll find ample sports facilities in the area, the legendary Fistral Beach is only a short drive and Newquay town centre is in walking distance, as well as there being good transport links. Local bus services, Newquay train station and the airport, provide you with links around Cornwall and connecting you to the rest of the UK and abroad. Porth is a delightful area of Newquay and a firm favourite with locals, and returning holidaymakers year after year.
