SITUATION

The property is located in the pretty village of Berry Pomeroy which has a sought-after primary school, village hall and 11th century church. This church, upon which much community life still centres, was featured in the film of Jane Austin's Sense and Sensibility. The village is surrounded by beautiful Devon countryside with ample opportunities for walking, riding and cycling in the midst of quiet rolling farmland.

More comprehensive needs can be met in Totnes, some 2 miles away. The bustling market town full enjoys a wealth of shops and recreational facilities. It is very much the gateway to, and an integral part of the South Hams, an area designated as of 'Outstanding Natural Beauty', with its magnificent countryside, and historic small towns and villages.

Within easy access to the property are access to the A380 and A38 trunk roads providing access to Exeter and Plymouth; while other transport links including Totnes Railway station with direct access to London Paddington as well as Exeter airport offer potential for trips further afield.

DESCRIPTION
