DESCRIPTION

110 London Road, believed to be a former Toll Cottage, is constructed of brick under a tiled roof. This terrific one off detached house incorporates many modern design concepts and would suit professional couples, growing families and even those downsizing. One key change which has developed in recent years is the importance of a large open plan living area that incorporates a kitchen, dining area and family space. There is no better example than in this house, with a superb open plan living space having bi folding doors. There are five bedrooms with vaulted ceilings, one being ensuite and a family bathroom. The overall feeling here is a house of character and individual craft, combined with a feeling of space and contemporary style.
