THE PROPERTY

This fine Edwardian property built in 1905, epitomises the period's timeless country house style with light, airy rooms and high ceilings. Originally built for returning rubber planters from Malaysia, who installed the tropical hardwood joinery in the house, Wykeleigh had been previously occupied by the Farwell family for over 60 years, after their return from India. Constructed with rendered elevations under a steep tiled roof, the house sits close to the centre of its own land. The current owners have carried out an exacting scheme of restoration and improvement over the last decade to create a beautifully presented home. Once inside, this five bedroom house has retained many original features, including bay windows, period fireplaces, original joinery and a generous skylight which floods natural light onto the landing and staircase. The elegant reception rooms and spacious kitchen/breakfast room, which opens onto a sunny terrace, flow together creating an ideal family or entertaining space. Upstairs the main suite comprises of a dual aspect bedroom with ensuite dressing room and shower room. There is a good ratio of recently appointed bathrooms to bedrooms over the two upper floors. Most of the principal rooms have bucolic views over the gardens to the surrounding countryside. Wykeleigh offers an ideal retreat and could appeal to a range of lifestyle or equestrian buyers providing considerable amenity and conservation opportunities.

Please see floorplan for accommodation and measurements.

OUTSIDE

The private driveway winds up the hillside, through species rich meadows and carpets of primroses and bluebells in season. Surrounding the house, the charming informal Westcountry gardens feature mature trees and shrubs including magnolias, camellias and rhododendrons, which gently blend into the countryside beyond. The sunny terrace by the kitchen is surrounded by more formal borders and behind the house is an enclosed kitchen garden and orchard.

OUTBUILDINGS

A range of traditional buildings to the rear of the house include:

- A L-shaped rendered block-built outbuilding (28.6m x 4.4m) comprising of triple garage, garden store, potting shed, workshop and coal shed.

- Range of block-built Stables (12.4m x 4.1m) with three loose boxes (3.20m x 3.10m) and tack room.
- Well-shielded from the house is the steel frame, block and profile construction General Purpose Farm Building (18.21m x 7.32m) with Lean-to (18.21m x 6.58m), used for cattle housing. Could easily convert to American style stabling.

The mainly sloping land provides protection and amenity use for the property.
