SITUATION

The Sidings is one of three properties in a private lane within the quiet and peaceful village of East Anstey, which has a primary school and a village church. It is situated on the edge of the Exmoor National Park which offers endless opportunities for walking and riding. Nearby Dulverton is well known as The Gateway to Exmoor and offers a variety of shops, together with a post office, chemist, doctors, veterinary and dental surgeries, library and primary school and three churches. There are also good recreational facilities.

DESCRIPTION

The Sidings is an interesting spacious conversion of a former railway building which became redundant after the railway line closed in 1966. East Anstey station was opened in 1873 on the Great Western Railway Taunton to Barnstaple line. It was disguised as a Welsh station in a 1944 Ealing Studios film, "The Halfway House". Due to "Beeching Cuts" the station closed in 1966 to passengers and in 1963 for goods, with the station itself later becoming a house. The property offers adaptable accommodation with many of the original features still in place including the original sliding door, and a large garden which incorporates the former railway line.

ACCOMMODATION

Access is gained through the front door into the hallway. The double aspect kitchen/breakfast room is a lovely room with views down the garden and is well fitted with a range of units, breakfast bar, integral dishwasher, space for range style cooker and washing machine. The dining area will accommodate a large table and has glazed doors leading on to the decking area from which one can enjoy the views over the garden. The sitting room is a cosy room with fireplace inset with a wood burning stove.

Stairs lead from the kitchen/breakfast room to the first floor where there are two double bedrooms, a good sized single bedroom and the well appointed bathroom with modern fittings including a roll top bath.

OUTSIDE

Accessed via a shared drive, a five-bar gate opens onto the driveway, which runs past the house to a parking area. The balcony can be reached from here. The driveway continues around the garden to another parking area on the left.

The property sits on approximately 1.8 acres of gardens and grounds, split into two large lawned areas with mature flower beds, hedging, woodland area, and a mix of plants and shrubs. There are also stables and a greenhouse.

This drive continues and gives access to the neighbouring farm which is some distance from the property. The farm also has another separate access to this one.

THE BARN

Attached to the house is a 34ft double-height Sidings Barn with a raised floor and large wooden doors on the side elevation. It offers potential for conversion and planning consent has previously been granted for conversion to further accommodation to turn the property into a five bed, three reception property in total.

SERVICES
