History

Having been built for the London and South Western Railway around 1850, primarily of stone under a slate roof, Eggesford Station was opened by the North Devon Railway on 1 August 1854, having been built on permission from the then landowner, the Earl of Portsmouth, whose country seat was situated within an estate near to the site of the station. It is said that the Earl agreed to the railway being built on his land on the understanding that all trains would stop at the station thus affording easy access to Eggesford House for visiting guests. To this day, all trains continue to stop at Eggesford on an hourly basis with the journey to Exeter Central taking about 45 minutes and the one to Barnstaple about half an hour.

The station was built in Tudor Gothic Style and is Grade II listed. The building originally provided a Station Master's residence as well as the ticket office, parcel store, waiting room and toilets. A further building was erected adjacent to the station and originally provided the Station Master's office and worker's rest room.

Description

Having been the subject of extensive improvements and conversion in their ownership, the current owners have created a wonderful home with a unique history. The property now offers well-presented accommodation throughout and the former ticket office, parcel store and ladies waiting room have been converted into a ground-floor one bed annexe that offers scope for holiday letting, accommodating a dependent relative or for extending the accommodation of the main house. At the northern end of the property is a former railway worker's building that offers much scope for further conversion to alternative uses if required (stp).

The Main House

The main front door leads into a HALL with ample storage cupboards. The double aspect LIVING ROOM has a fireplace with wood-burning stove and off this room is a SIDE HALL with doors into the garden and WET ROOM with shower, wash basin and WC. The KITCHEN/BREAKFAST ROOM has a bay window overlooking the platform and is fitted with a modern range of units, built-in oven, hob, integrated dishwasher and sink unit. A door leads through to the annexe.

On the FIRST FLOOR there are THREE DOUBLE BEDROOMS and a well-appointed SHOWER ROOM fitted with a modern suite.

The Annexe

The ANNEXE has its own independent access from the outside or could be incorporated within the main house by utilising the door through to the main kitchen.

The double aspect LIVING ROOM has a wood-burning stove with cupboards to the right. A door leads through to an INNER HALL with a large window looking out onto the platform. Off this hall is a KITCHEN which is fitted with a modern range of units with built-in oven, hob and dishwasher. The double BEDROOM has a bay window and a well-appointed EN-SUITE SHOWER ROOM.
