DESCRIPTION

Homewell Cottage is Grade II Listed as being of architectural and historical importance. The property presents painted rendered elevations, beneath the thatched roof and the origin of the core is believed to date back to the early 18th Century. The property has benefitted from an 'in-keeping' two-storey extension, as well as the addition of the detached garage building and guest annexe. There may be scope to extend the main house further and convert the garage into additional accommodation, subject to planning permission – bearing in mind that there is additional parking already in place. The cottage is complemented by delightful well-tended and secluded gardens, which amount to 0.37 of an acre. If you are searching for the quintessential detached, thatched period cottage in a timeless, edge of village setting, then they do not come much better than Homewell Cottage.
